represents "The Brooklyn Eagle," upon looking at one of the headlines of one of the papers, remarked, "Why how foolish of them to say Mrs. Hall knows anything about it, why I was up there the day of the interview, and a woman who could answer questions as good as Mrs. Hall did, is innocent of anything in connection with the Case." A man standing nearby then remarked to the reporter, "Don't you think Mr. Pfeiffer posted her as to what to say?" The reporter then replied, "Mrs. Hall or any other woman who had any connection with the crime sure would have made a blunder, no matter how well they were posted, and I honestly believe Mrs. Hall innocent. Mrs. Hall has a perfect right to demand a hearing before the Grand Jury, and furthermore, there are several papers who are going to take a stand in her behalf."

Upon conclusion of the above mentioned remarks, the reporter boarded the 6.33 p.m. train for New York City.

Operative heard a man at the station remark, "Well they are going ahead with it." Then a man who was standing along side of this man, said, "Do you really think they will connect her up with it?" The first man then said, "Well they are going to try to, and they got Gibson all fixed up so that she will tell a good story, but I honestly think she is a d--- liar." Both men expressed themselves as feeling that they would not believe the Gibson woman under oath.

At about 8.30 p.m. Operative left the railroad station and proceeded to the vicinity of George & Albany Streets, and while there overheard several reporters remark, "Well I understand they are not going ahead with that warrant." "Well we will all be going home, after tomorrow the Case will be dead."

At about 9.15 p.m. Operative returned to the railroad station and boarded a train for New York City, and discontinued.
